ADM-10	Administrative Schedule Analysis/Planning And Project Management Section Overview The records created and maintained by departments relevant to this section are diverse and vary significantly. In some departments, Planning records may be called Project records or vice versa. In other cases Planning/Project records may be combined. Generally speaking, Planning Records are created to document planning tasks including research, analysis, design, and documentation of recommendations and creation of a final document or plan. Planning records may be used as a basis for development, for selection of various alternatives, to obtain funding for implementation of a project or be used as the basis for future planning endeavors. Project Records can generally be defined as records created during the implementation of a project including the development of the project implementation plan, documentation of specifications, project reporting, audits, etc. Definitions: The Planning/Projects record series has been created to describe both Planning and Project records. The retention period for Planning /Project records is the same, regardless of what the records are called. Variation to the retention period assigned to the records is based on whether the records are identified as Routine versus Major and whether the records are Reports and Final Products or Workpapers. The following definitions will help departments to correctly identify/classify Planning/Project records. Routine versus Major Planning/Projects - Generally speaking, Major Planning/Projects have a city-wide implication/application or impact. They are mandated by the mayor or directed by Council and/or by state or federal law and are usually funded through the formal decision package and budget process or other specific Council action. Major Planning/Project records provide a historical blueprint of planning direction, budget priorities, growth patterns, etc. of the City during a given period of time. Conversely, Routine Planning/Projects are usually department specific; results oriented; have limited scope (such as impacting one neighborhood versus citywide) and may be considered to be routine/administrative in nature. Routine Planning/Projects should not used to classify Program Records (see explanation below). Reports and Final Products versus Workpapers - Reports and Final Products can be defined as the final documentation necessary to

	support the project or plan. The records may include the summarized decision trail that supports the conclusions, recommendations or findings of the Report or Final Product. Conversely, Workpapers can generally be defined as records that consist of rough notes, calculations, drafts, computer reports, etc. that are created and assembled in preparation of other records, to trace actions, steps, and decisions covered in the final report or product. Program Records - Department Program Records are not to be considered Planning/Project records. Department Program Records are created and are maintained as part of a department ongoing program or function (ie; Rental Licensing, Assessment Processing, Lead Abatement, etc.). These records will be included in Phase III of the City Records Management Redesign Project. File Plans for Planning/Projects - If departments have not created or implemented a Planning/Project File Plan, it is highly recommended that they do so. City staff may have difficulty following the retention schedule because Non-record materials, Workpapers and Reports and Final Products are being filed together. Implementation of a file plan will allow departments to standardize the method for filing records, identify required file and record components and segregate long-term records from short-term records for effective application of required retention requirements. Records versus Non-Records - Non-record material will not be accepted in the City Records Center and should be removed from all files prior to transfer. Destruction of non-record materials is exempt from the destruction notification requirement. See the Definition Section of the Introduction of the City of Minneapolis General Retention Schedule for the definition and general listing of non-record materials.
ADM-10-02	Administrative Schedule Analysis/Planning And Project Management Major Planning/Projects - Reports And Final Products Reports and Final Products of Major Planning/Projects are usually the result of major studies that address long-term planning, economic development, design/implementation of transit systems, demographics/census, long range forecasts and projections, productivity studies and other issues of public visibility and concern that address critical City functions. Typical records associated with Reports and Final Products may include the final report, summary documentation and conclusions used to support the report, audit trails leading up to final recommendations, etc. Note: The final reports for Major Planning/Projects have long-term historical and research value. Following the report publication, it is the responsibility of the Department to send two copies of each published report to the Municipal Information Library in City Hall. The records will be indexed and maintained by MIL and transferred to the Archives for permanent storage. A substantial number of these reports may be also found in the officially submitted information found in Petitions.
ADM-10-04	Administrative Schedule Analysis/Planning And Project Management Major Planning/Projects - Workpapers Workpapers of Major Planning/Projects are usually the result of major studies that address long-term planning, economic development, design/implementation of transit systems, demographics/census, long range forecasts and projections, productivity studies and other issues of public visibility and concern that address critical City functions. The workpapers generated during Major Planning/Project efforts have longer-term research value than Routine Planning/Project efforts. Note: If departments have not created or implemented Planning/Project File Plan, it is highly recommended that they do so. 	Routine plans and projects usually consist of studies, surveys, management audits or similar efforts that analyze or implement routine operations, procedures or processes or address department administrative problems. Routine Planning/Projects are usually funded from the department budget rather than through the formal decision package/budgeting process. The record series may include: reports, proposals, research and back up material as it pertains to the analysis and planning of a specific departmental project or special event, progress reporting, correspondence, general budget information, survey information, etc.
ADM-15	Administrative Schedule Capital Improvement Projects Section Overview This series includes the records that are created during the implementation of a major capital improvement building project (Convention Center, City Hall tunnel, Parking Ramps, etc.). Capital Improvement Projects can be divided into three functions that include records pertinent to construction - site, structure and process. Generally speaking, the site, structure and process records for Capital Improvement Projects will be assigned very long retention periods. Selected accounting and payroll records may have shorter retention timeframes. Note: See the Finance portion of the General Schedule for the retention of financial records.
ADM-15-02	Administrative Schedule Capital Improvement Projects Process Records Process documents are diverse and require careful examination as to retention requirements. Process records document the process of construction. They may also document/prove that an acceptable construction methodology was used in the construction process. Process records are important because there is no limitation for the time period when litigation may be brought regarding design and construction of a structure.	DEV100	PERM	PERM	PERM	ACT	DEPARTMENT/ PUBLIC WORKS	PUBLIC

ADM-15-06	Administrative Schedule Capital Improvement Projects Structure Records Structure records document the building (structure) that was constructed. Structure records may include as built drawings, specifications, change orders relating to design or material substitutions, minutes of site meetings, metal and other stress test results. Structure records are important because there is no limitation for the time period when litigation may be brought regarding design and construction of a structure. Note: Prior to destruction, the records should be reviewed to determine whether the structure has historical significance and will likely have value to future researchers (for instance a parking garage may have little value whereas City Hall structure records may have significant historical value).	DEV100	PERM	PERM	PERM *	ACT	DEPARTMENT/PUBLIC WORKS		* Retain records for the life of the structure plus 6 years.
ADM-20	Administrative Schedule City Governance/Administration Section Overview Many of the records maintained by departments relevant to this section of the schedule are copies of an original record held elsewhere. Many of the records are official records of the City that document the history of issues, actions and decisions through meeting minutes, reports, petitions and ordinances. A permanent retention period has been assigned to most of the records in the City Governance/Administration area of the schedule. All original records that have been assigned a permanent and archival status should be transferred and maintained in the City Records Archives managed by the Office of the City Clerk.

ADM-30-16	Administrative Schedule General Administrative E-Mail Records (See also the City of Minneapolis E-Mail Policy) E-mail is a document created or received on the electronic mail system including brief notes, more formal substantive narrative documents, and any attachments, such as word processing and other electronic documents, which may be transmitted with the message. E-mail, in and of itself, does not constitute a record series. Note: It is the function and content of the e-mail that determines which record series and corresponding retention period a message will fall under. To better manage e-mail records, this schedule divides e-mail into the following two classifications: Records of Value and Transitory Records. Records of Value are E-mail records that are required for ongoing legal, fiscal, administrative, operational or research purposes is to be considered a record of value. These messages, like any other record, are to be assigned to a record series based on the function and content of the message. For example, an e-mail message that contains draft budget projections for a particular division may be categorized as budget workpapers. It is the user's responsibility to determine the nature and content of the e-mail and to assign messages to the proper record series. The assignment will be the basis for the retention period that should be assigned to the record. Therefore, do not use this record series to schedule e-mail records of value. Transitory Record is E-mail that is of short-term interest with no documentary or evidential value is to be considered a transitory record and may be deleted at any time. Examples of this type of e-mail include: training announcements, meeting notices, publications such as FYI, personal messages, etc.	SEE NOTE	ACT	ACT	*	ACT	DEPARTMENT	PUBLIC	* DEPENDS ON RECORD CONTENT. Voice mail messages, in most cases, are not considered records and may be deleted immediately. In some instances, however, these messages meet the State of Minnesota definition of a record. As such, specific classifications of voice mail shall be retained according to the City of Minneapolis Records Management Policy. The function and content of the voice message determines the value and corresponding retention requirements of the message. Voice mail is considered a record if it is created for legal, fiscal, administrative, operational or research purposes. These messages, like any other record, are to be assigned to a record series based on the function and content of the message. They may be managed in the following ways: * In many cases, the content of the voice mail message may be transcribed on the record to which it pertains prior to the deletion of the message. For example, a vendor change of address left as a voice mail message is added to a purchase order. * In other cases, it may be necessary to create a written summary of the message and include the sender, receiver, time message was sent and other pertinent information prior to deletion of the message. * In circumstances where a message has evidential value that requires the message to be kept in its original format (e.g. a harassing message that may be used for employee discipline), contact your HR Generalist or City Attorney for further instruction. In all these cases, it is the user's responsibility to determine	SEE NOTE	ACT	ACT	*	ACT	DEPARTMENT	PUBLIC	* DEPENDS ON RECORD CONTENT.
